Teacher accused of stalking student

By Elizabeth Mohr

St. Paul Pioneer Press

MINNEAPOLIS -- An Oakdale man who was a teacher at a Minneapolis high school has been charged for allegedly making sexual advances and sending sexually inappropriate messages to a girl.

The Hennepin County Attorney's Office charged Daniel Arlen Anderson, 46, with criminal sexual conduct and stalking a person under 18.

According to the criminal complaint, a 17-year-old girl told police in May that Anderson, a social studies teacher at South High School, had asked her if she would have sex with him. He reportedly pulled her out of classes to ask her and sent text messages trying to arrange a meeting.

Anderson also allegedly sent the girl text messages with graphic descriptions of sex acts and sent her photos of his genitals, the complaint said.

Fire causes garage explosion

By Rian Bosse
Daily Journal

The Otter Tail County Sheriff's Department responded to the report of a garage fire west of Vergas around 4 p.m. on Wednesday afternoon.

The fire was discovered and, as first responders were en route, an explosion was heard as well. Responders quickly extinguished the fire, but the detached garage suffered moderate fire and smoke damage.

The fire and explosion are believed to have been caused by a ruptured fuel line of a lawn tractor. The homeowner recently used the tractor and parked it in the garage. It has not yet been determined what caused ignition.

The total cost of damages has not yet been determined.

State lapse leaves MNsure health applicants in the lurch

By Christopher Snowbeck
St. Paul Pioneer Press

ST. PAUL -- At least 16,000 low-income health insurance applicants never received letters telling them that the state needed more information, and many remain uninsured.

State officials disclosed the mistake Wednesday and blamed the problem on human error. The notices were supposed to tell the applicants to provide more information to qualify for the state's Medical Assistance program, but the notices were never sent.

The applicants applied through MNsure, the state's new health insurance exchange, but their eligibility for the low-income assistance couldn't be automatically verified.

"We understand that this is unacceptable to have not been sending these notices for this period of time — to have left people in this ambiguous status," said Chuck Johnson, the state Department of Human Services' deputy commissioner for policy and operations. "We're working to fix it as quickly as possible."

Notices in the future will be generated automatically by the information technology system. But the functionality for this isn't yet available from the exchange. So, earlier this year the Department of Human Services adopted a work-around process that broke down in February.

"The result of folks not getting this notice is that they've been in this pending status for some number of months — as many as six — waiting for some indication," Johnson said.

Going forward, applicants who are found eligible for coverage will get health insurance retroactive to when they submitted applications, Johnson said. If people incurred medical costs when they should have been covered by Medical Assistance, the state will cover those costs, he added.

But Johnson acknowledged that some patients might have delayed seeking medical care as their health insurance applications languished. Patients surely experienced stress and frustration, he added, as they turned to county workers for help trying to figure out if they had coverage.

"We apologize for the failure to provide these system-generated notices," wrote Human Services Commissioner Lucinda Jeson in an email to county officials Wednesday. "This mistake makes matters more difficult for you, our partners, and, more critically, for the people we serve."

Medical Assistance is the Minnesota's name for the state-federal Medicaid program, which provides health insurance for low-income residents.

The state launched MNsure last year as a tool for people to purchase commercial health insurance and determine if they qualify for Medicaid. It's part of the Affordable Care Act, the federal law requiring nationwide health insurance.

While the MNsure system eventually will automate more aspects of the Medicaid enrollment process, the Department of Human Services has had to develop a number of manual processes as the new system is being developed.

"It's not MNsure's job to send the notices," said Joe Campbell, a spokesman for the exchange. "The jointly owned system generated the notices and sent them for processing, as has been the process in place for months."

Starting last year, people who thought they might qualify for Medical Assistance could fill out online applications on the MNsure website. In many cases, the system automatically checked income, citizenship and other details with a federal data hub to make sure people qualified for coverage.

PUBLIC NOTICE OF EXTENDED ALLEY CLOSURE for CONSTRUCTION

Alley South of Lincoln Avenue Court Street to Mill Street

This alley closure has been extended one week due to obstacles encountered during gas main replacement operations.

The alley between Mill Street & Court Street will be closed for one additional week to allow for gas main replacement work to be completed. The alley will be temporarily reopened for the weekend but will close again Monday, July 7th.

During this closure period the mail box and utility drop boxes located in the alley will be accessible only by pedestrians using the City parking lot. Access to the parking lot will be provided on Court Street only from the south (from Washington Avenue) until the alley work is complete.

Once the alley work is complete traffic will be restored. The alley traffic will then exit using a temporary route through the City parking lot to its south entrance onto Court Street near the bridge.

Full access for businesses and residents on the southside of Lincoln Avenue from Union Avenue to Mill Street will be maintained from the other directions through the City parking lots. Access may change depending upon the construction operations.

Please drive carefully and be alert for construction activities. Thank you for your cooperation.

Don Edwards, PE, City Engineer
