'Hustle,' 'Gravity' lead Oscars

Associated Press

The Academy Awards appear to be the three-horse race many expected it would be, with "Gravity," "American Hustle" and "12 Years a Slave" all receiving a heap of nominations.

The nominations for the 86th Academy Awards, announced Thursday morning in Beverly Hills, Calif., were led by the 3-D space odyssey "Gravity" and the con-artist caper "American Hustle," both with 10 nominations. The harrowing historical epic "12 Years a Slave" trailed closely with nine nominations.

All were among the nine films nominated for best picture. The other nominees are "Captain Phillips," "Dallas Buyers Club," "Her," "Nebraska," "The Wolf of Wall Street" and "Philomena."

The most notable omission by the academy was Tom Hanks, whose lead performance in "Captain Phillips" was widely con-

MN Somali actor nominated for Oscar

Associated Press

MINNEAPOLIS — A Somali actor from Minnesota who made his acting debut in the Tom Hanks' movie "Captain Phillips" has received an Oscar nomination for supporting actor.

Barkhad Abdi and three other amateur Somali actors from Minnesota portray pirates who hijack an American cargo ship off the Horn of Africa in 2009 and take its captain, played by Hanks, hostage. Abdi is the pirates' ringleader.

Appearing on NBC's Today show Thursday, Abdi said he was so excited about the imminent Oscar nominations that he couldn't sleep Wednesday night.

Abdi was also nominated for a Golden Globe, which was awarded to Jared Leto for Dallas Buyers Club.

Captain Phillips has also received Oscar nominations for best picture, best adapted screenplay, film editing, sound editing and sound mixing.

considered a shoo-in. It was a particularly surprising snub since Hanks is widely beloved by the academy, having been nominated five times previously, winning for "Forest Gump" and "Philadelphia."

Robert Redford, expected by many to be nominated for the shipwreck drama "All Is Lost," also missed out on a best actor nod.

The best actor nominees are Chiwetel Ejiofor ("12 Years a Slave"), Bruce Dern ("Nebraska"), Leonardo DiCaprio ("The Wolf of Wall Street"), Matthew McConaughey ("Dallas Buyers Club") and Christian Bale ("American Hustle").

Disney's making-of "Mary Poppins" tale "Saving Mr. Banks" also failed to land either a best picture nomination or a best actress nod for Emma Thompson.

The best actress nominees are Amy Adams ("American Hustle"), Cate Blanchett ("Blue Jasmine"), Sandra Bullock ("Gravity"), Judi Dench ("Philomena") and Meryl Streep ("August: Osage County").

With her nomination, Streep pads her record for most acting nominations. This is her 18th nod, including three wins, the last for 2011's "The Iron Lady."

Martin Scorsese's "The Wolf of Wall Street" came into Thursday as one of the biggest question marks of an awards season that has often left many guessing. The nearly three-hour Wall Street extravaganza of money, sex and drugs became a lightning rod of debate, with many questioning whether it glamorized the infamous trader Jordan Belfort.

But "The Wolf of Wall Street" landed big nominations: best picture, best actor (DiCaprio), best director (Scorsese, his eighth for directing) and best supporting actor (Jonah Hill).

Also doing well Thursday were Spike Jonze's futuristic romance "Her" (five nominations, including best original screenplay for Jonze), and Alexander Payne's black-and-white road trip "Nebraska" (six nominations, including best director for Payne).

One of the day's biggest winners was the 27-year-old producer Megan Ellison, the daughter of billionaire Larry Ellison. Her Annapurina Pictures produced two of the best-picture nominees ("American Hustle" and "Her") as well as the Wong Kar-Wai martial arts drama "The Grandmaster." She celebrated by tweeting "17!" — the total nominations her films received.

Though historically the most-nominated films have taken home best picture, that's not been the case in recent years. Six of the last 10 years the most-nominated film hasn't triumphed in the end, including last year when Steven Spielberg's "Lincoln," with 12 nominations, was beaten by Ben Affleck's "Argo."

This year's Oscar telecast on March 2, with Ellen DeGeneres hosting for the second time, has particular pressure on it to live up to the increasingly popular Golden Globes.

JC Penney closing 33 stores, 1 is in Minn.

Associated Press

WORTHINGTON — J.C. Penney plans to close 33 stores, including one in Minnesota, as part of a cost-cutting initiative.

The Minnesota store slated for closure is at the Northland Mall in Worthington.

J.C. Penney announced Wednesday it will cut 2,000 jobs as the struggling department-store operator tries to get back on the path to profitability.

Fees: Could put field plans on hold next summer

fees because of all the fundraising that was done for the ball field.

"It feels like a tax," Wilson said.

They're about half-way done paying off the $97,000 of the Farmer's Field project, according to Prischmann, which included a grass infield, enclosed dugouts, fencing, enclosed batting cages and bullpens. The city provided a concrete slab behind the backstop and a larger set of bleachers.

The newly-converted baseball field will be ready to use this spring.

They borrowed about two-thirds of the $97,000 and are working to pay it off with fundraisers and grants. That's one reason Prischmann's concerned about the proposed fees.

"By raising these fees to us ... it's going to impede and slow down our payback process," he said. "Our initial plan was to do this field and then pay it off and then move right over to the Legion field because it needs some serious help, too."

Improvements to the Legion field could run upwards of $40,000 for the backstop padding and infield drainage fixes, according to Prischmann.

Adding the lining fees has put some doubt into the plan.

"It doesn't make you want to pour a lot more money into a project," he said.

Committee member Ben Schierer saw the merit in Prischmann's comments and wants to compare costs with other sports.

The committee will likely look at that information at the next meeting.
